

Yasheng Group and Meng Yuan Agriculture Company's Industrial Hemp Crop Successful

REDWOOD CITY, CA--(Marketwired - Nov 3, 2014) - Yasheng Group (OTCQB: HERB), a high-growth diversified China-based agricultural conglomerate with U.S. headquarters in Redwood City, California, today announced the success of its first industrial hemp crop grown with joint venture partner Meng Yuan Agriculture Company in Inner Mongolia.

This season Yasheng and Meng Yuan experimentally grew one thousand mu of industrial hemp, making full use of favorable local natural conditions and organized technical personnel to guide field management using modern large-scale development technology. Inner Mongolia's Bayinnaoer region has a long history of hemp cultivation. The local variety of hemp has tough skin and large seeds which are efficient for producing oil.

Next year Yasheng and Meng Yuan management will continue to work together to substantially expand the plantation, which is expected to grow to an area of 5,000 acres. The companies also plan to invest in the construction of a high-technology industrial base to process hemp medicine, food, health care products, fiber, and clothing in the period of 2015-2020.
